Explanatory notes

This competence refers to the ability to convey to pupils why the media-supported learning content is relevant to the future and important for their future life and professional development.

Rationale

In a rapidly changing world, it is important that learning content is not only geared to the present but also to the future of the learners and that students understand this.

Example

An educator who has this competence could explain to students in their computer science lessons why learning programming skills is relevant for the future.
